THE BRIDGOROM.

General Hastings was born in Greenfield, Massachusetts. When a small boy with his parents, he went to Willoughby, Ohio, and settled there. At the breaking out of the war he enlisted as a private.
He was aftewards appointed 2d Lieutenant of Company I, 23d Ohio Volunteers, General Rosecrans was Colonel of his regiment, Stanley Matthewa, Lieutenant Colonel, and President Hayes, Major.
In Sheridan's Shenandoah campaign he served as Adjutant General on the staff Colonel, and President Hayes, Major.
In Sheridan's Shenandoah campaign he served as Adjutant General on the staff of President Hayes, who commanded the Kanawha division. He was seriously wounded at the battle of Opequan, September 1st, 1861. He was mustered out August 28th, 1865, as lieutenant Colonel of the 23d Ohio volunteers, receiving the brevet of brigadier general. Since the war he has served in the Ohio legislature and as marshal of the northern district of Ohio. He resigned the latter position in 74, and removed to Rockford, Illa, where he now resides. His business is that of a banker. His record as a soldier was excellent, he being noted for conspicuous gallantry.

The following is a copy of the invitation to the wedding:

"The President and Mrs. Hayes request your presence at the marriage of their niece, Emily Platt, to Russell Hastings, Wednesday evening, June 19th, at seven o'clock. Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C."

An especial agitation is noticeable among the street ca more rapid means of traveling is ascrib ed by them to the novelty of the elevated railways, and they express an expectation of regaining soon their former patron of regaining soon their former patronage. They cheerfully note the discomforts of struggiing up steep and slippery steps in wet weather, and of etanding on an uncovered platform while awaiting the train, which robe them of their passengers, and take a mild satisfaction in expatiating on the dangers run by those who overcrowd the cars on the elevated track. A just idea of the lasting effect of the new line on the street car patronage cannot, of course, be formed until the present excitement is over, and its regular, permanent business established and lar, permanent business established an ascertained. But it is likely that rapi transit will before long revolutionize ex isting systems of transportation in New York; and if the experiment is successfu there, other cities will not to profit by the example set them.

The question is simply whether Europe or Russia shall exercise a preponderant influence in European Turkey. The Congress could not deal hastily or rapidly with a question so important and so complex. Its delays and frequent adjournment, so far from suggesting an unfavorable issue, only show that the Congress is real, not merely a formal assembly, and that it will enter thoroughly into the questions submitted to it. The truth is it would be impossible to bring together a body of such powerful statesmen merely to ratify foregone conclusions. The balance of opinion pronounced at the Congress will be quite distinct from the views of particular states.
